Fatou N'Diaye is an accomplished dancer, choreographer, and performer from Senegal, West Africa. She is a former member of Ballet Nationale du Senegal. She was the founder and director of Ballet Silimbo in Senegal and the founder and director of Silimbo D'Adeane West African Dance Company in Boston, MA., where she currently resides. The company name Silimbo D'Adeane means "Sunrise over Adeane". Adeane is the village where Fatou was born in Casamance region of Senegal. Fatou teaches in the Cambridge and Boston area performing in local schools, colleges, and cultural arts events. She has dedicated herself to sharing her culture and heritage through dance, music, and storytelling. Her West African Drum and Dance Conferences furthers her mission and showcases the talents of fellow artists across the African Diaspora.

Bringing together the finest dancers and drummers from West Africa and the African Diaspora to share their artistry and culture with the Boston area and surrounding communities, and to increase public awareness of Africa's rich heritage and contribution to the arts worldwide.
